New Austrian envoy arrives

Ingo Muscatelli

Ingo Muscatelli arrived yesterday to take up his post as Austrian Ambassador.

Dr. Muscatelli said at the airport that he does not think the differences between Israel and Austria over the treatment of dropouts in Vienna will harm the good relations between the two countries.

Dr. Muscatelli, 41, who arrived with his wife and two children, served as press attaché in Washington and London between 1962 and 1970 and was minister-counselor in London from 1970 to 1973. Muscatelli has a doctorate in philosophy from the University of Vienna. He replaced Johanna Nestor.

Evangelical groups proclaim solidarity with Israel

WASHINGTON.—An extraordinary outpouring of support for Israel was demonstrated yesterday by the leadership of the Evangelical Christian community in the U.S., estimated as numbering about 40 million Americans.

Dr. W.A. Criswell, pastor of the First Baptist Church of Dallas, the largest single Southern Baptist congregation in the U.S. with over 20,000 members, presented Israel Ambassador Simcha Dinits with a scroll proclaiming Evangelical Christian solidarity with the State of Israel. Some 20 other prominent Evangelical Christian clergy from around the country flew to Washington to attend the ceremony, during which Dr. Criswell declared his community's total support for Israel "with all our heart and soul." Dr. Criswell recently made front-page headlines in the U.S. by publicly endorsing President Ford rather than fellow Southern Baptist Jimmy Carter.

Suicide bid by Yadin friend alleged Medical Centre agent out on IL10,000 bail

By ARTHUR KEMELMAN

TEL AVIV.—A man who acted as agent for the owners of the Israel-America Medical Centre building — for whose subsequent purchase suspended Kupat Holim chairman Asher Yadin is now being held by police — was released on IL10,000 bail yesterday after six days in custody.

The man, Yosef Edelsburg, had brought together the incomplete building's South American owners and the Histadrut's Solel Boneh company, which later backed out in favour of Kupat Holim. He was arrested on Friday evening on suspicion of serving as go-between for a bribe.

During yesterday's hearing, police told Magistrate Aryeh Evenari that Edelsburg is also suspected of tax-evasion and other unspecified breaches of the law.

There were no new arrests yesterday in the Yadin probe, but police questioned several new people connected with what was described as various public institutions. They also questioned several other persons, and were going over documents taken from banks by special court order.

Still in detention yesterday were Mordechai Elison, who represented Kupat Holim at the time the construction company was thinking of buying the Tel Baruch medical centre; Meir Kimhi, suspended chief accountant of Kupat Holim; and the sick fund's suspended chairman, Asher Yadin, whose arrest on October 18 was followed by the Cabinet's cancellation of his nomination as next Governor of the Bank of Israel.

Police were not commenting yesterday on the apparent suicide attempt by Malka Hertzberg, a friend of Yadin's, who was found unconscious three days ago on the floor of her Tel Aviv flat.

Miss Hertzberg, who was found by her brother Zvi, was treated at Ichilov Hospital for a sleeping-pill overdose and subsequently released. Her name had been mentioned earlier this week in connection with the theft more than a year ago of paintings from various Histadrut institutions, including Kupat Holim, and from the artist who painted the pictures, Zvi Shur.

Shortly after the Yadin probe began, a friend of Yadin's reported by brought 10 paintings "for safe-keeping" to a friend of Miss Hertzberg's, Leah Sverdelov, who brought the matter to the police's attention. It is presently being investigated.

According to a source close to the Hertzberg family, Miss Hertzberg had asked her friend to guard the pictures out of fear they might be stolen.

Public c'tee will check into it Histadrut Executive clashes on Kupat Holim

By JOSHUA BRILLIANT

TEL AVIV.—Histadrut Executive members yesterday clashed over who was responsible for the lack of control of Kupat Holim's economic dealings, now under police investigation.

The Likud complained that the Alignment handled the affairs of Kupat Holim and other Histadrut enterprises as if they were party property. "You excluded the Likud faction (from executive positions) so that we wouldn't interfere... with your shadowy activities," MK Yoram Aridor charged.

Aridor complained that, despite Histadrut undertakings to disclose everything connected with Kupat Holim, the sick fund's budget hasn't been presented to the executive.

But Rakeh's Yehoshua Irgel pointed out that a Likud member headed the sick fund's Control Committee. "Didn't they let you look into their dealings?" he asked rhetorically. "Then you should have resigned." Shimon Aizikson, the Alignment's whip, also claimed the Likud shared the blame for insufficient supervision of Kupat Holim affairs. "Six Likud representatives are in Kupat Holim's Central Committee," he said. Another Alignment leader, Gideon Ben-Yisrael, said, "Members of the Central Committee from all parties, including my own, failed to stand up for their rights (to supervise activities) as stipulated in the regulations."

The Executive, by a majority of 70 to 22, later endorsed a Central Committee decision to set up a public committee to examine Kupat Holim's institutions, activities and control system.

Sivan likely to take Gafny's job

Jerusalem Post Economic Reporter
Amram Sivan, Director-General of the National Insurance Institute, seems the most likely candidate for the post of Director-General of the Finance Ministry, after Arnon Gafny, the present holder of the post, is appointed Governor of the Bank of Israel.

At present Sivan is reluctant to take the job. Other names mentioned to The Jerusalem Post are: David Weinsal, Director-General of the Housing Ministry, and Sar-Shalom Shlir, Director of Budgets.

Peres warns of new pressures

Jerusalem Post Political Reporter
TEL AVIV.—Defence Minister Shimon Peres yesterday predicted political pressures when the momentum for a new Middle East settlement begins following the American elections.

Peres told the Labour Party's Ben-Gurion Circle that negotiations will centre on proposals for an end-of-belligerency agreement in which Israel will be called on to yield "a lot," while it was not clear what it would get in return.

He called for settlement on the areas Israel wanted to keep because settlement would strengthen this country's hand in the negotiations. "We certainly won't be able to hold our own merely by words," he said.

One of the areas to be settled is that extending from Sharm el-Sheikh to the Dead Sea. A major bone of contention will be Jerusalem, and it is vital to increase the Jewish population of its surrounding area.

Tel Aviv whips Bologna 110-81 in basketball

By STEVE KAPLAN
Jerusalem Post Sports Reporter
TEL AVIV.—Playing outstanding offensive basketball and getting top-notch performances from every player, Tel Aviv Maccabi crushed Sinudyne of Bologna 110-81 in a European Cup match at the Yad Eliyahu Sports Palace last night.

Taking advantage of excellent shooting and a clever zone defence, the Israeli team put six players in double figures. Lou Silver led the way with 22 points; Arie Perry had 20.

Mickey Berkowitz, who did not score a point in the first half, electrified the crowd in the second with beautiful steals and excellent marksmanship, chalking up 16 points. Jim Boatwright, held to one point in the first half, came back in the second half with 15 points at crucial moments. Eric Meckin came off the bench to give Maccabi rebounding strength and 10 second-half points.

The hero of the game, though, was Tel Brodie — 33-year-old Maccabi captain and former captain of the national team. In the first half he came into the game and inspired a sluggish Maccabi effort with excellent defence and finished the half with 13 points. His basket from 10 metres at the final buzzer gave Maccabi its margin of 29 points.

This surprise margin of victory almost assures Maccabi a place in the European Cup finals, where one of the opponents may be CSKA of Moscow, the Russian champions. This will be determined after the return match against Sinudyne in Bologna in three weeks.

Peretz foe sweeps Ashdod Port poll

By YITZHAK OKED

Jerusalem Post Reporter
ASHDOD.—The new "boss" of the Ashdod docks — Eli Maman — promised last night to begin a new era at this port, plagued by labour troubles during the reign of his opponent Yehoshua Peretz.

Maman and his list swept all 11 seats on the dock workers' council in yesterday's election, winning 621 of the 987 votes cast (1,230 dockers were eligible to vote). Peretz's group, found responsible by the Histadrut for financial irregularities, had been disqualified from standing for election.

The jubilant Maman, whose group's complaints had led to the Histadrut investigation, told The Jerusalem Post last night that he would begin by starting negotiations to get Ashdod's container terminal, completed in May, into operation. (The Ports Authority has given the workers until November 17 to open the terminal if they want to avoid firings and the stoppage of all development projects at the port. For the past several months about 90 per cent of all Israel-bound container-ships have been going to Haifa. Yesterday there was only one ship in port here.)

It was the first time in eight years that neither Yehoshua Peretz nor any of his followers was running for election.

The Histadrut's Control Committee had ordered the election after finding that from May 1971 to December 1975 the workers committee, then run by Peretz and his friends, had not kept proper books on committee money. The Histadrut committee had ruled that no one who had been a member during that period could serve again for the next two years. As six of the current committee — elected after Peretz resigned — were in this group, the local labour council was instructed to hold immediate elections. (The other five belonged to Maman's group.)

The elections took place at the workers' dining hall, where three booths were put up. Local labour council officials were in charge, and no complaints were filed. (Earlier several members of the Peretz group had protested that the elections were being staged too quickly to give them time to appeal the Histadrut committee's ruling.)

Social workers hold quiet demonstrations

Jerusalem Post Reporter

Several hundred social workers, members of the national union, yesterday went into the second day of quiet demonstrations by receiving their clients at government institutions which employ social workers and which have resisted their demands for improved pay and work conditions.

In Jerusalem demonstrators gathered outside the Prime Minister's Office, which houses the Civil Service Commission.

The show-down meeting of social workers with representatives of the Finance Ministry, the Civil Service Commission, and the Union of Local Authorities is scheduled for Sunday. If there is no significant progress at that meeting — no news of "how much and to whom" — social workers will converge on Jerusalem from all parts of the country and intensify the demonstrations, according to Nathan Lavon, Jerusalem union head.

The social workers say they approached Welfare Ministry officials with the details of their conditions almost a year ago. Despite Minister Ze'evin's promises of support, they maintain, concrete steps were only taken as a result of the recent sanctions.

The social workers have submitted to their employers the following demands:

- Improved salaries for workers in the field. This could take the form of grants such as those hospital nurses received or upgrading of the social workers' pay scale along the lines of teachers' salaries.
- A shorter work week, room for receiving clients in privacy; financial aid for workers' children in day-care; telephone and car for making home visits.

- Employment of non-social workers only on jobs that they undergo improved in-service training.
- Elimination of distort pay and benefits for social workers in different institutions rises for professionally trained workers who are not graduates, and now get 9 less than those with a B.A.

The bureau noted that, in two years, 1974-1975, real wages had actually declined by 2 per cent.

Wages of workers in services, trade, industry, and banking increased by the average during the first half of the year, the bureau said. Of civil servants, on the other hand, the average salary in the first half of 1976 was IL2,960, it added.

The bureau noted that, in two years, 1974-1975, real wages had actually declined by 2 per cent.

family doctor should have known that the clinic is closed on Wednesdays. The doctors also claim that the woman was sent to the diabetes clinic on several previous occasions by her doctor, but she never showed up. They also point out that the referral slip was shown to several doctors in the emergency room and not only to the doctor who decided to send her to Ashkelon.

Dr. Daniel Verbihoff, who referred Esther Ravah to Ashkelon hospital, has left Beer Sheva and is now in the north. He took a leave of several weeks until feelings in Beer Sheva calmed down. Relatives contacted refused to reveal his exact whereabouts. Dr. Verbihoff is an immigrant from Argentina and has been working at the hospital for nearly two years.

Telegrams of solidarity were received by the doctors committee from doctors in other hospitals urging them to continue their struggle until the Health Minister apologized. Kupat Holim doctors in the Negev region said they will also give full support to the strike. Doctors and they would send a delegation to this morning's demonstration in Jerusalem, but they would not stop working until they received permission to do so from the Israel Medical Association.

Dr. Yuli Nudelmann, a senior surgeon at Haifa's Rambam hospital and chief adviser for absorption of immigrant doctors from the Soviet Union, yesterday of Shemtov's resignation in the Prime Minister and the Minister. He said that in the name of the doctor in the set prior to an investigation serious blow to medical and to the Government's ally.

In a statement issued by the Ministry spokesman, Dr. Shemtov refused to retract remarks in the Knesset which the impasse with the doctors had actually read the remarks, they would not be argued.

Shemtov, the statement merely quoted a complaint by him by the director-general of Health Ministry against the sheba doctor who allegedly will deal with the complaint the statement notes.

The spokesman also quoted a legal adviser to the minister, saying that there is no legal power against publishing the patient's name against whom such a complaint has been made. On the six-week-old, same patient's case, the minister's office yesterday between the doctors and their union. However, it is believed that will meet over the weekend. Sunday since the hospital have said they will resign on Monday effect in one month.

Mitterrand on 'areas'

totally new national entity in the areas, or a fusion between the Palestinians and Jordan.

"We have gone on record that we shall never accept any solution which could endanger the existence of Israel," he said.

Noting that his party interpreted Security Council resolution 242 "half-way between the French and the English versions" — a reference to the dispute about withdrawal from territories or from the territories, he said it was inconceivable that Israel should withdraw from everywhere for the sake of negotiation. Certain adjustments would have to be made in the 1967 borders where strategic, religious and emotional factors were involved, he said. Jerusalem was one case and vital highways were another.

Earlier in the day, at a lunch given by Defence Minister Shimon Peres, the two discussed the Lebanese situation and the problem of Hebron, among others.

Meeting Foreign Minister Yigal Allon, they discussed the Allon Plan, and Mitterrand said he fully understood Israel's security headaches. The big problem, he said, was to reconcile the just demands to one people for security, to other people for liberty.

Mitterrand visited Hebron, an invitation of Mayor Fahed Khatib, an invitation which Mitterrand cleared with his Labour party. He was gratified that the request, escorts suggested he talk to the request, while they waited all night, established a rapport with the town's residents. Mitterrand's visit of both disappointed Kawasme whom the mayor that the Israel's may be titles had to discharge their obligations for law and order in the mayor spoke English, and a U.S. entry journalist in Mitterrand's entourage translated.

In Tel Aviv, he was accompanied by his meeting with former Golda Meir at Labour Party quarters, where secretary Meir Zarmi was his host. Histadrut he was received by secretary-general Yehoram Meir. Mitterrand files home at 11 this morning but the rest of the delegation will have two more to do and many more meetings in the next days.

The voter, they suggested, should mark the ballot with the date he received it in the mail.

If the lawsuit is successful, the presidential election will not be final until November 12.

Meanwhile, preparations for receiving up-to-the-minute election results are proceeding in Jerusalem and Tel Aviv.

The U.S. Cultural Centre and the Jerusalem Hilton are sponsoring an election "event" to begin in the New York State election hall at 10.30 p.m. on Tuesday and continue through the early hours of the following morning. "The Candidate," a feature film on elections, will be presented for the first time in Israel. In addition to hook-ups with wire services and the Voice of America, the event will include a panel of American and Israeli experts to discuss and predict the results.

The U.S. Embassy in Tel Aviv will open an "election watch centre" starting at 4 a.m. on Wednesday to provide up-to-date returns in the elections for President and various congressional seats. Segments of the campaign debates between Ford and Carter will be screened during the dull moments, along with campaign films.

For people unable to attend in person, a special election watch switchboard (telephone 02-54333) will be operating to provide the latest election information.

UJA delegates see war games

UJA delegates, wrapped up against the blowing sand, watch the manoeuvres yesterday.

By JUDY SIEGEL
Jerusalem Post Reporter

SOMEWHERE IN THE NEGEV. — Sitting on a hill in a hazy landscape, the UJA delegates watched a training exercise for a paratroop brigade, coming a day before the 20th anniversary of the Sinai Campaign and a day after the IDF's Armoured Corps Day. An actual military exercise with tanks, armoured personnel carriers, Kfir fighters and Phantom jets, the manoeuvres were rescheduled so that the Americans could see them.

Sitting on long rows of sandbags arranged on a slope, the UJA leaders looked like bandits as they watched the military exercise. The delegates were dressed in desert gear, wearing sunglasses, handkerchieves and plastic bags from their brunch snacks.

Chief of Staff Rav-Aluf Mordcha Gur arrived by helicopter with O.C. Central Command Aluf Yona Efrat to welcome their guests and watch the brigade in action.

Four Israel-made Kfirs swooped low over the audience and then ascended abruptly, followed by four Phantom speedsters in formation and looking like choreographed acrobatic dancers. After the planes dropped napalm bombs on "enemy" targets, artillery and tank fire opened up, producing huge clouds of black and white smoke.

When the "Israeli" vehicles were themselves beleaguered in smoke, the Chief of Staff took over the microphone from a military press officer and explained that the smoke was a tactic to confuse the "enemy." The shelling was followed by an attack of paratroop battalions — some mounted on armoured personnel carriers and others transported by helicopter. Red smoke signalled that "wounded" had to be evacuated.

For an exciting finale, called "a beautiful sight" by Gur, a number of Hercules planes dropped supplies attached to parachutes for the "victorious" troops.

As the UJA leaders bid farewell to their military press escorts (one for each of the 100 buses) and girls soldiers, men in Jeeps chased after some of the Kfir parachutes that took wing in the high wind.

8 tons of food for Lebanese

By YOEL DAE
Jerusalem Post Reporter

METULLA. — An eight-ton truckload of sugar, flour and rice, purchased by Haifa's Maronite Committee for Aid to Lebanon, crossed the border to Alshiya village in south Lebanon yesterday.

The foodstuffs were brought to Metulla and then reloaded here on a Lebanese truck waiting across the fence to take them to the village, which is near Marjayoun. Committee representative Anis Aboud said the shipment was the fifth so far, bringing the total sent by the committee's Christian and Jewish donors to 58 tons of food and other goods, worth IL180,000.

The Lebanese Christians who received the truckload said the supplies were urgently needed by the border villages and the Christian fighting men.

The new Cairo cease-fire agreement for Lebanon had as of yesterday made no mark on traffic across the border. Several dozen Lebanese came to the "Good Fence" to receive medical aid, purchase goods and visit relatives in Israel. Phalangist fighters, dressed in khaki and carrying light arms, were also much in evidence along the fence, and talked freely with Israelis. They described morale in their units as generally high, and said they had drawn great encouragement from their recent successes. It was learned that the IDF is looking for jobs in the North to provide some of the refugees from Alshiya with work in Israel.

Druse holy books brought to Israel

Jerusalem Post Reporter

METULLA. — A consignment of rare and important Druse holy books was brought from Lebanon to the "Good Fence" yesterday for safe-keeping in Israel.

The books, which were described as some of the most important written material of the secret Druse religion, were kept up to now in the village of Haskiya, in Fatland.

This was the second border-crossing for the book in 28 years. On the eve of the War of Independence, the books were taken from Israel to Lebanon, because Druse religious leaders feared for their safety.

The books were received at the border by a Druse spiritual leader who went through the checkpoint without a security check. (According to Druse religious law, only an inner elect among the Druse is allowed to see or touch the books.)

restrictions on Jewish in the Soviet Union

ARAH HONIG
Jerusalem Post Reporter

Soviet citizens may be in small groupings in Israel, even if to hold a simple religious ceremony. The restrictions on religious freedom in the USSR are often run by party appointees who seek to hamper rather than facilitate Jewish expression. The synagogues are also subject to careful KGB scrutiny.

Another article which hits the Jewish community very severely is the one dealing with religious education, especially as Jewish history and culture are bound up with religion and thus any Jewish teaching may be construed as religious instruction. Teaching is now "admissible" only in ecclesiastical educational institutions according to the established procedures. Such Jewish institutions do not exist in the USSR altogether, and rabbinical students must make their way to Budapest.

Even the only apparently liberal article of the new law spells discrimination against Jews. It extends the rights of "religious centres and diocesan boards" to produce articles of religious cult for sale to believers and to acquire buildings of their own. However, the Jewish Affairs Institute which has submitted the new law notes that of all denominations, only Jews have no central or regional bodies.

citrus exporters may hire foreign ships to beat strike

By YITZCHAK OKED
Jerusalem Post Reporter

ASEDOD. — The Citrus Marketing Board is considering hiring foreign carriers for Israel fruit exports if the disruptions caused by Lim Labov disputes continue, a senior CMB official told The Jerusalem Post yesterday.

Ten days ago delivery of some 60,000 crates of grapefruit aboard the ship Haviva was held up because of a dispute. Now, with the ban on sailings declared Wednesday night by the Ratings Union, 30,000 crates of grapefruit on the Marika are affected. This roll-on-roll-off ship was to have sailed Wednesday night for Marseilles. A second ro-ro ship, the Iris, was to have loaded 44,000 crates of grapefruit for Trieste, but because of the strike these were not loaded.

Another 40,000 crates of grapefruit, and 20,000 of navel oranges, were to have been shipped on Sunday, and the CMB is now trying to find other ships to carry these 104,000 crates before they rot.

Citrus board export manager Amihai Zur told The Jerusalem Post yesterday that these strikes have come at the worst possible moment. "This four-week period between the middle of October and the middle of November is when we have the market all to ourselves. It's just after the South Africans have finished their export season and before Cyprus and the Americans have started exporting," he stressed.

The CMB was scheduled to export 215,000 crates this week, 370,000 next week and 550,000 a week later. By the start of December they should be exporting about a million crates a week, so as to ship out 50m. crates of citrus during the current export season.

Meanwhile, another group of agricultural exports — those of Agrexco, the Agricultural Produce Export Company — are at risk. Agrexco head Moshe Shavit told The Post that the government firm has two British flag refrigerated ships under charter. A third, a Norwegian ship will start operating in December for the three peak winter months, he added.

The fear that agricultural export by air might be stopped receded yesterday when the country's civil aviation workers cancelled their strike. Air exports will pick up next week when CAL's new cargo airline, starts its daily shipments of produce aboard a Boeing 747 cargo plane.

J'lem Betar soccer team punished

Jerusalem Post Sports Reporter

TEL AVIV. — The Football Association disciplinary court on Wednesday night imposed on Jerusalem Betar a punishment of two home games to be played at least 50 kilometres outside of Jerusalem and without public attendance.

The Jerusalem club was to blame for its supporters' attacks on referee Yehoshua Loya during the game against Tel Aviv Maccabi at the YMCA stadium three weeks ago, the FA court ruled.

The ruling is likely to cost Jerusalem Betar IL25,000. Jerusalem Betar's next two home games are scheduled against Petaht Tikva Maccabi and Tel Aviv Shimshon.

Israel v. Harrow in cricket 'Test' today

By JACK LEON
Jerusalem Post Sports Reporter

TEL AVIV. — Both Israel and London's Harrow club are confident of victory in their cricket "Test," which takes place today and tomorrow at the Tel Aviv University sports stadium (play starts at 9.30 a.m. on both days, weather permitting). However, if they differ on the outcome, the old rivals do agree that a closely-fought contest is likely in the double-innings game.

This will be the third meeting between the two teams, with another scheduled match washed out. Six years ago, Harrow achieved a five-wicket win against Israel in London in the last over, and in 1972 the visiting English side triumphed by eight wickets at Ashdod. Rain prevented play when Israel toured the British Isles again in 1974.

Playing with the present Harrow side is the renowned Worcester and England all-rounder Basil D'Oliveira, who in the game's four one-innings matches to date has scored 208 runs for twice out. In addition, he has taken seven wickets with his off-break bowling.

The popular tourists have so far won one game and lost one, with the remaining two fixtures being drawn. Harrow is the only non-Jewish club among the dozen overseas cricket teams to have visited Israel.

The Israeli team — described by local cricket association chairman Ivan Kantor as "one of the strongest we have ever fielded" — consists of David (captain), Moshblatt (vice-captain), Alshuler, Brody, Horowitz, Kessel, Perelman, brothers Nissan and Reuven Reuben, and Isaac Solomon and Nathan Solomon, the Medical Association.

All universities to open Sunday, strike not sure

Jerusalem Post Staff

HAIFA. — The Committee of University Presidents yesterday decided to start the school year at all universities next Sunday. (At Bar-Ilan it has already started.) Any school days the students missed due to strikes would not be made up, they announced.

They noted that every student would be able to get an annual grant of IL700, linked to the Cost-of-Living Index, if he were found eligible by a special committee which would determine the criteria not later than the middle of December. They also noted that a committee would review tuition for the next school year. It will in no case be higher than the IL4,933, linked to the index, being charged this year.

Student leaders still have not decided whether or not they will call a strike on Sunday. They will meet again with Education Minister Aharon Yadin this morning.

Their demands, which were already presented to the minister (and to the press) early this week, centre around the establishment of a committee to examine the functioning of the universities and assurances by the minister that graduated tuition will be instituted next year.

They want it written into the agreement that, if for some reason the parties to the pact cannot agree on a graduated tuition scheme, next year's tuition will be frozen at this year's IL4,933 or, alternatively, tuition will revert back to last year's IL2,700 plus two years' cost-of-living increments.

S, JDC and dropouts

drop-out rate averages 50 per cent. Commenting on reports from New York that the JDC and HEAS have come out against plans to limit the dropout rate in Vienna, JDC chairman Jack D. Weiler told The Jerusalem Post in a telephone conversation from New York last night that "no statement to such effect has been issued by either organization, and we have no idea whatever as to where these reports originated."

A member of the committee of eight and head of the Council of Jewish Federations and Welfare Funds, Philip Bernstein, told The Post also by phone from New York yesterday that "HEAS and the JDC are cooperating completely in the committee deliberations" on ways to decrease the dropout rate. Bernstein was yesterday empowered to answer inquiries on the matter by committee chairman and head of the Jewish Agency Board of Governors Max Fisher, "who is the only one authorized to issue any statements on behalf of anyone represented on the committee, including HEAS and the JDC. Such a statement has not been issued," Bernstein said. He added that "the committee has not yet completed its review. It is a highly complex subject and process. The committee is therefore not yet ready to make any statements and will not be for some time."

Manelis Prize set up

Jerusalem Post Reporter

TEL AVIV. — The Israel Medical Association yesterday established the Manelis Prize in memory of Dr. Gideon Manelis, who was killed one year ago in Nahariya when he refused to prescribe medicines requested by a patient. (The patient has since been sentenced to life imprisonment for murder.)

The award will be given annually to a doctor who distinguishes himself in internal medicine.

Dr. Manelis was deputy head of the Medical Association.

Korean probe spreading

Tongson Park and an influence in the U.S. capital for nearly a decade, was said by associates to be on an extended business trip outside the country although he had cooperated fully with the U.S. Department of Justice's investigation.

A three-page memorandum containing the names of 90 members of Congress was found in his briefcase when he was searched by customs inspectors on his return from South Korea in December, 1973. Many prominent senators and representatives were on the list, the newspaper said.

It said Park had told Federal investigators that he had made several major political contributions, including a $10,000 payment to the wife of the Governor of Louisiana, Edwin Edwards, when Edwards was a member of the House of Representatives. Edwards has acknowledged the gift.

The "Washington Post" has reported that highly secret intelligence reports have linked President Park Chung Hee of South Korea to allegations that he personally ordered South Korean intelligence agents to bribe U.S. Congressmen.

(In Seoul, a senior South Korean official yesterday accused the "Washington Post" of "malicious sensational reporting" and said the allegations of President Park's involvement were "totally groundless.")

The "Washington Post" said recordings were made of discussions in the presidential mansion in Seoul between President Park, Tongson Park and South Korean intelligence agents. It quoted informed U.S. Government sources as saying the recordings showed that the South Korean President directed Park to give cash, furniture and campaign contributions to U.S. Congressmen.

At least 22 Congressmen were reported by the "Post" earlier this week to be under investigation for receiving substantial gifts or money from South Korean agents in exchange for legislative action favouring South Korea.

The U.S. Justice Department earlier this week issued a subpoena seeking access to South Korean bank records in Washington. The "Washington Post" said yesterday that the subpoena had now been withdrawn. It said the South Korean Embassy had agreed to give investigators access to the records voluntarily.

Israeli troops take over Sharm e-Sheikh.

TWO HUNDRED HOURS TO RAS MUHAMMAD

The Israeli capture of Sharm e-Sheikh and Ras Muhammad, at the tip of the Sinai Peninsula, was one of the most spectacular actions of the Sinai Campaign. Ze'ev Schul recalls the 'mad dash' down the Peninsula in an article marking the 20th anniversary of the war.

debatable. Undoubtedly the unstinting arms flow provided by the French at the very last moment had a major impact. The bombing raids flown by British squadrons operating out of Cyprus — and the occasional naval bombardments also counted. But the conquest of Sinai remained, essentially, an Israeli show-throughout.

THERE A number of unique aspects to the Sinai Campaign (as far as the IDF was concerned).
For Israel, the final casse belli had undoubtedly been the closure of the Straits of Tiran. But even before then, sometimes during that hectic summer of 1956 and the ever mounting number of fedayeen raids and reprisals by the IDF, the Government reached its final decision.
Military strategists still disagree as to whether the opening Israeli move — the airdrop at the Parker
Memorial — had been a wise one.
This was after all 270 kilometres behind the lines and success or failure would have to hinge on a second paratroop unit operating as mechanized infantry, which would be expected to break through and come to the relief of the besieged unit. In the event, it all ended well. But some of the experts still think that the Israeli High Command took chances it could have avoided.

The first phase of the operation — on October 29-31 — saw the airdrop and the rest of the brigade (mechanized) breaking through the Egyptian lines and eventually reaching their target during the night of October 30/31. The Egyptian defence at Quseima (junction) were also breached and the following night a massive attack on Rafah opened the coastal way to the Suez Canal. But the advance eastwards from the Mitla Pass — or rather through it — was to prove one of the most difficult objectives of all and it was there that the Israeli units suffered their heaviest casualties.

The Egyptian retreat from Sinai began on November 1 and — in effect — sealed the outcome of the campaign. The following four days saw the Israeli units advance at points 10-15 kms away from the Canal (here and there sneaking up for a quick "look"). Meanwhile the famous Ninth Brigade under Avraham Yoffe had accomplished a major feat on its own. It captured Sharm e-Sheikh and raised the Israeli flag in what was to become the culminating moment of the Campaign.

IDF losses: 171 dead and four soldiers taken prisoner.
Egyptian losses: Several thousand dead and 6,000 prisoners taken in addition to immense masses of war material, including brand new Soviet equipment which enabled Israel's western allies to take their first close look at our comparitor with Eastern block war materials.

The IDF had achieved all its objectives. The first had been to deal the Egyptian logistics array in Sinai a serious blow and delay if not foil altogether Egyptian war preparations. The others were to open the Tiran Straits and put an end to fedayeen operations out of the Gaza Strip and Sinai.

The campaign had its unique moments.

The first frigate ever to fall into enemy hands intact — the flagship of the Egyptian Navy, the Ibrahim el Awwal — was taken as it attempted to approach Haifa.

But the most impressive result of the campaign had been the revealing of the low level of Egyptian officers.

ALUF Avraham Yoffe was in command of the Ninth Brigade achieving what is generally believed to have been one of the most spectacular coups of the Sinai Campaign. Within four and a half days, he led a 40 km.
long convoy in a mad dash along the southern shoreline of the Sinai Peninsula to Sharm e-Sheikh, Ras Muhammad and Ras Nasrani. This, he claims, was the only tangible result of the campaign.

"We gave up all the rest. But the Straits of Tiran were kept open for almost 11 years. How would I appraise this feat today? Nothing short of a mad determination to get there, get it over and done with and get back home."

Yoffe's campaign is generally considered an organizational masterpiece.

It started five days after the spectacular jump of the paratroop battalion over the Mitla Pass. "We had to have open skies. Couldn't afford to bother with strafings and all that. So we waited until the French and the British, operating out of Cyprus, had done most of the job. I understand they got most of the Egyptian planes on the ground. We didn't need any air support and didn't get any, except for occasional evacuation of the wounded which was done by Piper-cub aircraft.

"I'm proud — even if I do say so myself — of that convoy. Two hundred and eighteen vehicles — including 105 spanking new GMC's on loan from the French army — delivered the matériel the day before the operation. I don't know about the others. I only know that I'd never have been able to make it without those French trucks."

"Each of my vehicles was a completely self-contained unit. It carried sufficient food, water and fuel for five days. Each convoy segment was again a semi-independent unit of its own, which could go into action without assistance. I did have a couple of tractor and bulldozers for the tough spots but we never used them.
All our road paving was manual work."

"The first time we were really stuck was roughly off Nuweiba, some 30-40 kms. inland. We were stuck in a gravelly desert area and those trucks to tug each other uphill. It took us 11 hours to cover a stretch of 12 kms. with all the men out and pushing. It upset our schedule and, what was even more important, took a serious bite out of our fuel and water resources. We had another bit of difficult terrain later on and all told lost about 15 hours. This second place was somewhere near Dahab. I think we covered about 300 kms. No one of us had ever covered that terrain before. All we had were maps and some aerial photographs.
I relied mainly on the fact that most of the ridges seemed to be running parallel to the direction we intended to move. But there was of course no telling what we would encounter en route."

"Opposition? We ran into one ambush — near Dahab. First a platoon and later on a squad of an Egyptian camel patrol. They evidently didn't know what was going on behind the advance guard. All told, 215 vehicles stretching out over 40 kms. at times.

"We lost only six vehicles. And I had those cannibalised — anything we could reuse was taken with us.
We made it ... It didn't take us 200 hours the way you said it did. It was 100 hours — like the road to Suez.
Only we started a couple of days late."

"I think we can draw two kinds of conclusions from the campaign."

"One concerns the human element. My brigade, the Ninth, consisted 50 per cent of new immigrants. This was the first time we had such a large percentage of new immigrants in a brigade — and I must say that they lived up to our expectations — to the hopes we had...
The other was the new army which Yigael Yadin had built up during the early fifties. As to general aspects of the campaign — Dayan deserves all the credit he got. Initiative and courage paid off, as they have to this day."

"I was asked during a lecture tour in Rhodesia, immediately after the campaign, how I felt about the retreat. I replied that I hadn't asked any questions when I was ordered to move in and I didn't ask any when I was ordered out. I was a soldier."

"Today, as a civilian and a member of a political party, I do of course feel differently about these things. Now I believe that we should have resisted the withdrawal, that we could have withstood the political pressure as we can today."

The Jewish destiny — on film

"The impression that we are all so sad seems to me to be misleading."

died throughout the centuries. But I most say that the impression that are all so sad seems to me to be misleading. Quite the contrary, the Israelis are vigorous, energetic, cheerful, seeking the dolce vita and laughter, not as antidotes to the Holocaust and the wars, but as values in themselves. Even our scandals spring from this passion and gusto for living. Sir Walter Raleigh and others like him were great takers of bribes, and they lived it up while building a great empire. We are both very bourgeois and very Elizabethan: these qualities are the sources of our strength. We believe in the present and the future as well as the past.

It would have been refreshing to see films about my type of Israel, and many such have been made by Israel Television. But of course they could not be shown in competition with modern films, because they were all shot in black and white, and would be dismissed as oddities, like the films of the early years of this century, on the programme. "The Amazing Years of Chaima," now being shown on Tuesday nights.

One last comment on the Festival as a whole: the flute can be a lovely instrument, but I wish somebody would give the Beduin and Kibbutz kids some fiddles to play occasionally.

IT IS AMAZING how many of us know about the past, to judge from "Treasure Hunt," which was very good this week, with a new cast performing in the key roles. Arye Orgad was far more relaxed than Yitzhak ("Zachi") Shimon usually is, and played the role of moderator as a modern permissive teacher rather than the stern dominie, the way "Zachi" does it. Arye remained good-humoured and relaxed despite some "punctures," as we Israelis call errors and breakdowns, and guided treasure-seeking architect David to his destination in Montmorency's printing press. It was a close thing: only a couple of minutes stood between David and the loss of his hard-earned IL2,850.

I have a vague impression that General Lew Wallace and his Ben Hur have been used before in a Treasure Hunt, but it was news to me that I.D. Frumkin was imprisoned in the Kibbutz by the Turks for writing in "Havatelet" that General Wallace was "a republican despot." As a journalist, I am delighted by the thought that nothing like that could happen today. Non-journalists may be more dubious about our right to print what we like, when we like, and how we like, let the libels fall where they may.

"THE GLITTERING PRIZES," that excellent series, was devoted this week to the grim trials and tribulations of poor Joyce, imprisoned earlier on by Alan, who reminds us of David Frost, and so is disliked intensely by most Israelis, because Frost once did a programme about Israel which many Israelis thought was adverse to Israel. Remember? Anyway, Joyce married good-looking Dan in stead of Alan, and paid a heavy price for this folly, since Dan believed in many kids, and a sort of "Wuthering Heights" kind of life in the country, while Alan went international and rich.

What is more, poor Joyce never had a television set. As a result, her trials did nothing but quarrel and scream and run around under Momma's feet while she was doing the laundry or whatever, so she had to scream at them, in a refined,
British, Cambridge way, of course.
Alan reappeared in her life, and gave them a television set, so she went up to London and got Alan to get her a TV programme. The children began to look at the television, and became as good as gold, till their idiot father shot the set.

Moral: even in the depths of the country, TV can bring happiness to a family, provided it's in colour.

We have two new programmes,
Owen Marshall and Rockford, both new only to non-followers of Jordan.
They are not at all bad. But how will we live without Kojak?

Challenge in a buckle

WITH GREAT perseverance and determination, one of the newer members of the family has managed to reach the age of four. This is not only a matter for congratulation, but also for a solemn appraisal of her achievements to date and a sober look at her future prospects.

On the eve of that momentous day, she demonstrates her ability in putting on her sandals and even, by dint of repeating to herself that the buckle goes near the little toe, putting them on the right feet. Lace-ups are in a different and more advanced category, but these, too, will be conquered after just one more day. She can dress herself, except for the details of the buttons at the back.
However, when the morrow dawns,
she assures me, there will be no more difficulty, as she will then be quite old and able to reach places inaccessible to people who are only three. Not wishing to shatter her optimistic dreams, I keep to myself the knowledge that age and experience are of no help with fastenings that go down the spinal column. These are manufactured by misogynists exclusively for women, who happen to be double-jointed contractors. All others have to get help, whatever their age. It is doubtful whether she will have acquired this skill even if she gets to 104, but I leave her to find this out for herself.

a mark on every ship indicating the limit to which it might be loaded. To this day it is called the "Plimsoll line," in honour of his efforts.

This week we read of the first waterborne vessel in history, Noah's Ark. It may seem idle and meaningless to speculate on the "Plimsoll line" of Noah's Ark, not unlike the medieval discussion as to how many angels could dance on the head of a pin, or to be more prosaic, the number of steps in Jacob's ladder. Yet the Midrash (Genesis Rabbah 33:10) quoted by Rabbi Isaac actually works out the ship's load, including the displacement, and not on the basis of mere guesswork, but on the data given in the Bible.

From the verse "And the Ark rested on Mt. Ararat in the seventh month, on the 17th day of the month," the rabbis deduce that the Ark was submerged 11 cubits in the water. How so? The top of the mountain protruded above the water on the first day of the 10th month (8:6).

That is the 10th month after the beginning of the Deluge, which was Marchesvan (7:11) and was thus the month of Av. We are told that at their height, the waters were 15 cubits above the highest point on earth (7:20). The waters, therefore, gradually receded for 50 days, from the first of Sivan to the first of Av.
Since they were 15 cubits above the tops of the mountain, the rate of recession was one-quarter of a cubit a day.

If so, in the 18 days from the first of Sivan until the 17th, they had receded only four cubits of the 15. On that day the Ark grounded on Mt. Ararat.
Therefore, it was submerged in 11
cubits (15-11) of water.

In chapter 6, verse 16, we are given the dimensions of the Ark, which includes the detail that it was 30 cubits high. Thus the extent of its submer-sion in the water was just over one-third of its height, i.e. 11 cubits out of 30.

Is there any shipping expert who can supply the information as to how this compares with the Plimsoll line?

Philip Gillon talks with David Dortort, the creator of 'High Chaparral'

Master film-maker outlines his creed

DAVID DORTORT, creator, writer and executive producer of "Bonanza" and "High Chaparral," holds very strong views about the image of the Jew projected on films.

"Almost all films deal with the Jew in one of two ways," he says. "The first is to give the audience a trip down nostalgia lane to the East End of New York. There you have the quaint Jew, who has nothing at all to do with the contemporary Jew and his problems. There is great emphasis on ethnic difference."

"The other type of film is actuated by self-hatred — horrifying stuff castigating everything Jewish, in a way that would provoke storms of protest if done by non-Jews. 'Daddy, Kravitz.' 'Goodbye Columbus.' 'Blaine May has just done a show, 'Heartbreak Kid,' in which she cast her daughter as a screaming young Jewess without elementary table manners: when she sees the food on the table in a restaurant, she whoops with joy and drams everything into her mouth with her hands. So her husband looks with wonder at a demure, blue-eyed WASP girl who passes and spends the rest of the film chasing her. No wonder. But all the Jewish girls I know behave perfectly in public."

"Why can't we do a film about a Jew as he really is, a member of the mainstream of American society, an ordinary modern person, but with specific problems? But I don't suppose we could get anybody interested in financing such a film."

Dortort has been writing and producing films for many years; he has won two Emmy awards for the best screen writer. "Bonanza" was well-named: in it he created the greatest single hit in the history of television. It has been seen by 260m. people a week in 88 countries. "High Chaparral," another subtle Western of his, is at present delighting Israeli audiences late on Thursday nights.

He has written everything — novels, short stories, dramas, film scripts, TV scripts — but he is now concentrating on television. Although he has done every kind of script, he admits to having a special affection for the Westerns he writes so well.

"The Western is the closest thing we have to the classic Greek drama. Good versus evil. Man defying the gods and fate, and prepared to pay the price of losing his life. It is interesting that the Western has one-tenth of the violence of the thriller, and that you are less confined, you can develop character and plot any way you like. Most of these stories get down to four basic situations drawn from the Greek myths. Oedipus — son against father, and the king must die that his people may live. Damon and Pythias: the loyalty among men. Daedalus: man flying to the stars but limited by his own mortality. Theseus: the man who fights for good because somebody has to do so. Around these themes you can write a million stories.

"I try to teach while I entertain. In 'Bonanza' I introduced the idea of the hero out West who is a family man, not just a wandering gunman, and of a father who treats his sons with affection and teaches them compassion, who is not just a stern patriarchal figure. And in both 'Bonanza' and 'High Chaparral' I tried to do justice to the Mexicans and Indians, to break up the revealing stereotypes of what they are like. Basically I'm a historian in my education I specialized in history."

"It may be too late to rewrite history for the books, but we can do it through film. For example, our American books claim that the Pilgrims Fathers who landed on Plymouth Rock were the first white men to set foot on North American soil. The truth is that the Spaniards had built a great cathedral at Santa Fe a century before. And Columbus discovered America — but who were the people who met him?"

"I get thousands and thousands of letters from American women with Spanish names, thanking me for showing a Mexican woman, Victoria, in 'High Chaparral' as a faithful, virtuous, church-going wife, instead of a slut in a cantina with her breasts hanging out."

THIS IS Dortort's third visit to Israel: what advice would he give people working here in the film and television industries?

"Get into colour. We pioneered colour in television with 'Bonanza,' and we had to fight for it. Israelis must have it, it's a new medium, a new element. Watching black and white is like looking at a symphony orchestra but not hearing the music. Tests have shown that colours give an added dimension to life, an emotional intensity you can't get without it. I have an impression that Israelis are accepting the limitations of black and white too passively."

"Concentrate on script-writing. Everyone seems to want to be a director. But nobody can make a good film with a bad script. The best director in the world and the greatest stars can do nothing unless they have a good script. Work on character and plot. Don't be self-indulgent: don't think only of the art of the film, think also of the craft of it."

He won his Emmys for "The Ox-bow Incident" and for adapting William Faulkner's short story, "An Error in Chemistry," for television.

"I had an office next to Faulkner. He was very conscientious about script-writing, but somehow just couldn't produce good scripts. I suggested we try 'An Error in Chemistry' because it had all the elements of a good script. Despite his modesty, he was very pleased. We drank Bourbon whisky together, although I couldn't keep up with him, and we did good work together and became great friends. He was delighted when I got the Emmy."

Israel trio makes mark in far north

By SHEILA SHAMIR

Special to Jerusalem Post

FINLAND is pretty much off the beaten track as far as touring Israeli entertainment stars are concerned. They usually make for Paris and London, proceeding from there to entertain audiences in Germany, Holland, even in Sweden. The small Israeli colony in Helsinki was therefore delighted to hear that the singing trio of "Chocolate, Menta, Mastic" had arrived in the land of lakes and saunas.

The Finnish judges at the Eurovision contest in The Hague had given the Israeli girls their highest quota of points and Helsinki's leading nightclub, the "Kalestatorp," ("Fisherman's Hut" for the uninitiated) booked them for a two-week appearance.

Having followed the career of red-headed Ruthi Holzman, dark Yardenia Azael and blonde Lea Lupatin since their Na'hal days, we were prepared for good entertainment. In the somewhat confined space of the nightclub, their voices resounded in superb harmony and the applause from normally reserved Finns was deafening. Their programme was varied, ranging from "Eva Nagila" to a beautifully sung Bach arrangement popularized by the Swingles and including, of course, their Eurovision contest entry, "Emor Shalom," which they sang in four languages.

The "Chocolate, Menta, Mastic" trio off to fresh fields and pastures new.

The three singers generated more Finnish warmth for Israel than a ton of the best-written propaganda. The press reviews were a joy to read and never, in our two years in Finland, had we seen the name Israel received with such journalistic acclaim.

Israelis here were impressed by the girls' serious attitude to their work and their lack of arrogance. At an Israeli social gathering, they were among the first to help their hosts with the washing-up, but left the party in good time to keep up their record for punctuality in their stage appearances. They pride themselves on being ready to perform 30 minutes before curtain time. On one of the High Holy Days, we took Ruthi and her husband to Helsinki synagogue. She recognized immediately and warmly. One old lady took her and said: "I saw you singing yesterday and I felt so very proud, hesitated, then added firmly, 'to be Jewish.' The Jewish community will remember Ruthi Holzman with respect for her polite refusal to sign autographs in the synagogue. 'This isn't the place to autograph,' she said quietly in reply to a request. 'Some other place?'"

Israel may not have athletic world standard. But we do have ty of singers. And entertainers sometimes better able to reach man-in-the-street than a legion professional diplomats.

STAMPS / HARVEY D. WOLINETZ

It's all a question of politics

INTERNATIONAL politics are often reflected in a nation's stamps. Two forthcoming releases from the Republic of China (Nationalist Chinese on Taiwan) represent its struggle to establish itself as the representative of all the Chinese including those on the mainland.

Dr. Sun Yat-sen, considered the "father of his country" by both Chinas, was commemorated by a stamp issued by the Communist People's Republic of China on the 100th anniversary of his birth in 1906. Now the Taiwan regime seeks to strengthen its claims by emphasizing the relationship between its first president, Chiang Kai-shek, and Sun Yat-sen. A high-value NT$10 release of a three-stamp set marks the 90th birthday of Chiang, showing him and Sun Yat-sen at the window of a train in Canton. The advance bulletin announcing the issue notes that under Chiang's leadership the "Chinese people were continuously striving to carry out Dr. Sun Yat-sen's will."

A second set of three stamps will be released on November 12, the 110th anniversary of Sun Yat-sen's birth, and will coincide with the opening of the 11th national congress of the Kuomintang (KMT), the Nationalist People's Party founded by the doctor which eventually took control of China when the Manchurian rulers were overthrown. The NT$2 stamp depicts the KMT flag along side that of the Nationalist Chinese, and a NT$10 stamp shows side-by-side portraits of Sun Yat-sen and Chiang Kai-shek. An accompanying souvenir sheet, made up of the two stamps, attempts to connect the undisputed fact that Sun Yat-sen was the "father" of China, to that of the disputed one, that Chiang was the true representative of all of China.

Iran, Turkey and Pakistan have emphasized their political tie by each country issuing a similar three-stamp set to mark the 12th anniversary of their Regional Cooperation for Development (RCD) agreement. Each set depicts portraits of Kemal Ataturk (founder of the Turkish Republic), the Shah of Iran and Muhammad Ali Jinnah (founder of Pakistan).

The Republic of the Philippines marked the October 4 joint annual meetings of the Board of Governors of the International Monetary Fund and the World Bank — the first such meeting in Asia since 1964 — with two stamps carrying 80-centimo and 1.50 peso values.

Taiwan is issuing a three-stamp set seeking to affirm its claim to be the representative of the Chinese people.

TODAY'S DEAL, reported by the International Bridge Press Association, reveals an interesting procedure when the count is not entirely clear. There are apparently 10 top tricks: four in spades, one heart, three diamonds, and two clubs. So it seems as though the two extra tricks needed must be made by ruffing two hearts in dummy.

But wait a minute. Suppose hearts do not split 4-3, and the diamonds do not split 3-3. Then you may be in trouble. As an alternative, you can plan to ruff only one heart in dummy — providing you can make four diamond tricks. This seems to be a better choice, since it depends essentially on a diamond split no worse than 4-2. You have to lose one trick anyway.

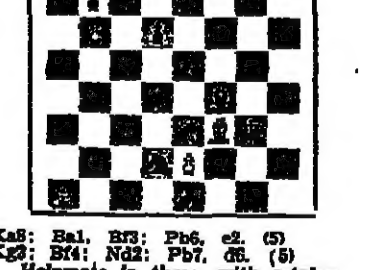

You win the opening lead of a spade with the ace in dummy, and then give away a diamond by playing a low diamond from each hand. This may at first seem to "go against the grain," but it insures the contract.

The opponents have no better play after winning the diamond trick than to continue with a trump. You win in hand, play the heart ace, trump a heart in dummy, lead a club to the ace, pull the outstanding trumps, and claim the balance.

You give away a trick — but make the contract.

Heart to heart

By MACAREE DEAN

Jerusalem Post Reporter

KFAR SABA. — "The Seattle Example," where wives took a brief crash-course in resuscitating their husbands who suddenly keeled over with heart attacks, will soon be launched here.

The first course, probably of eight hours, will be given in December, according to Yosef Milo, who heads the newly formed "Heart to Heart" group, a "voluntary association on behalf of the Cardiac Institute of the Meir Hospital" here. The group has already received the support of leading citizens of the 300,000 population hospital serves, as well as that of Wilo, Na'amati, and other volunteer groups.

"In Seattle," Mr. Milo explains, "between 60,000 to 70,000 persons, mainly married women, took the course. It is estimated that they saved the lives of about 1,000 persons, mainly men, who collapsed in their homes or in the street." The course to be given here, the first of several, will concentrate on teaching two crucial life-saving first aid actions: heart massage and mouth-to-mouth resuscitation.

Dr. Eliezer Kaplinsky, head of the Cardiac Institute in the Meir Hospital, and medical adviser to the "Heart to Heart" group, explains that "in modern cardiology, tremendous advances have been made within the hospitals in preventing the death of heart victims — if we get the victim to the hospital in time. Today, we can save the lives of 85 to 90 per cent of those who reach our emergency wards."

"But outside the hospital, progress has been very slow. About 50 to 60 per cent of heart attack victims die before they reach the hospital. And we believe, as they have learned in Seattle and other places, that much can be done to save many of these persons. If the victim is treated early enough by a person trained in this specific task, death is often avoidable," he says.

The group will concentrate on three main areas of action. The first is to teach immediate resuscitation, plus finding ways and means of rushing the patient to the hospital. The second is to undertake preventive measures, teaching about diet, exercise and so on plus rehabilitation of patients discharged from hospital.

"Heart disease develops very slowly, but it strikes like lightning," Dr. Kaplinsky notes. "And we can often prevent it from developing."

The third area of action is to raise funds to carry out volunteer work, as well as to buy modern instruments to expand the Cardiac Institute's facilities, where there are now six beds. The group also hopes to set up volunteer branches abroad; the first will probably be founded in Cherry Hill, New Jersey, the second in Chicago.

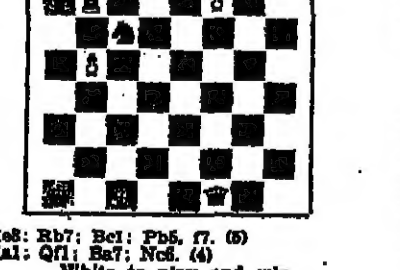

In Western society, Dr. Kaplinsky says, heart disease has reached epidemic proportions. It takes more lives than any other factor, disease or accident. Some 40 to 45 per cent of all deaths are due to heart disease, only 20 to 25 per cent to cancer.

"The strange thing is," adds Mr. Milo, "that when you mention the word cancer, the thought association is one of a lingering death. But when you mention the word 'heart,' the thought association is of love — not of death. This is one reason why so much is being done to fight cancer and much less to fight heart disease."

(Information in English, or Hebrew, on the work of the group can be obtained by writing to its secretary, Miss Sarah Fellach, Post Office Box 33, Kfar Saba.)
